Keaton Weber came to IU to pursue a major in music education with a minor in conducting from the Jacobs School of Music. He appreciated an opportunity to receive a world-class music degree.

When Abby Tiepen visited IU, she recognized the university for what it is. “I saw how many opportunities IU promised, so I took a chance and applied. I haven’t looked back since!” Now Abby is pursuing her passion for biology while working in a research lab where she gets real-world, hands-on experience.
Immerse yourself in a different culture and gain a new perspective.

Taking part in one of the 380+ study abroad opportunities adds to your college education in indescribable ways. Flexible programs last anywhere from a few days to a few months and span over 70 countries. Every school at IU has a program—connect with the Office of Overseas Study to explore the diverse options. Need and merit-based scholarships also make studying abroad affordable.

Senior Kaitlin Scott decided to attend IU after hearing former ambassadors and faculty speak at Direct Admit Day at the Hamilton Lugar School of Global and International Studies. “The Hamilton Lugar School prepares students to be globally ready—from language skills, to research methodologies, to policy analysis.” Kaitlin’s experiences with the United Nations and global work with the U.S. Department of Commerce reflect this to be true.
Joshua Stewart pursued his individualized major of marine biology by literally diving right in. His underwater research projects inspired him to get his Ph.D. at Scripps Institution of Oceanography. Now he researches whales at the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and as an associate director at The Manta Trust.

Grace Ybarra, Spanish B.A., Journalism B.A.J., 2022
At IU: Worked at the Indiana Daily Student, was a sideline reporter for Big Ten Network Plus broadcasts, and interned for WISH-TV’s sports department.
After IU: A sports anchor and reporter in Columbus, Mississippi, she covers SEC sports, bowl games, and 60 local high schools’ athletics. She was recognized by the Mississippi Association of Broadcasters for the best sports story in the state.

Jennifer Burnett-Zieman
At IU: Studied economics and biology as a pre-med, earning a B.A./B.S. in 2002.
After IU: Going into the Peace Corps with an eye toward public health led to providing HIV/AIDS education in Ghana. She received a master’s in public and international affairs from Princeton University in 2006, which she put to use in disease eradication in South Sudan. Currently she is director of monitoring, evaluation, and learning at Palladium.

Kenneth Guerra
At IU: Graduated with a B.S. in microbiology in 2016 before returning to the Maurer School of Law to receive his J.D. in 2019.
After IU: Uses his STEM background to focus on complex patent litigation in the areas of biotechnology and pharmaceuticals before U.S. district courts and the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit.

Leah Johnson
At IU: Studied journalism at The Media School and earned a B.A.J. in 2016.
After IU: Wrote “You Should See Me in a Crown” in 2020, which received a Stonewall Book honor and was named as one of the top 100 young adult books of all time by TIME magazine. Her second book, “Rise to the Sun” was released in 2021.

How to apply

1. Review our admissions standards
See what high school courses you need to take to be college-ready.

2. Know our deadlines
November 1 is the early action deadline (non-binding) and the deadline for the highest scholarship consideration.

To meet this deadline, you must submit a complete application for admission, including your official high school transcript, an essay, and self-reported or official SAT/ACT scores (if applicable*) by this date.

Application deadlines
Submit a complete application by this deadline:
November 1 January 15
February 1 March 15

3. Submit a complete application
You have two options to apply:
• Apply IU Application
• Common Application

Only one completed application will be accepted.

You also need to:
Submit your essay as part of your application. Note: You can choose from any of the essay prompts when applying through the Common Application. If you use Apply IU, please complete the essay portion.

Submit your official high school transcript.

If you took the SAT or ACT, share either your official or self-reported scores (if applicable*) by one of our application deadlines. Please note: test scores that are listed on your high school transcript do not count as self-reported—you must self-report them on your application or via our self-report form. If you self-report and are offered admission, the offer will be contingent upon receipt of official test scores from testing agencies, which must match or be higher than those you self-reported. If you self-reported scores from multiple tests, you will need to send official score reports for each test.

Ready, set, apply!

*Admission to IU is test-optional. To learn if this is the right path for you, visit: go.iu.edu/test-optional

If you're a transfer, intercampus transfer, adult, military/veteran, second degree applicant or a visiting student, visit our website to learn how and when to apply for undergraduate admission: go.iu.edu/learn

Get MoneySmart
Our MoneySmarts program helps you establish good financial habits, make informed financial decisions, and reduce your debt.

Since 2011, we’ve helped IU Bloomington undergraduates reduce their student loans by 35%. Fifty-three percent of our 2021–2022 bachelor’s degree recipients graduated with no student loan debt. Nationally, that figure was about 43% in 2017–18, the last year for which data is available. In total, about 87% of our 2020–2021 bachelor’s degree recipients graduated with either no debt or debt less than $30,000.
